About FDP

This Faculty Development Program (FDP) is aimed at integrating Digital Humanities, Digital Pedagogy, Digital Storytelling, Digital Arts & Aesthetics, Natural Language Processing (NLP), Machine Learning (ML), Artificial Intelligence (AI), and Generative AI, which can revolutionize teaching and research in the digital age. Educators can explore computational approaches to literature, history, and culture by incorporating Digital Humanities, while Digital Pedagogy enhances teaching methodologies with interactive and technology-driven strategies. Digital Storytelling and Digital Arts & Aesthetics provide creative avenues for knowledge dissemination, fostering engagement through multimedia narratives. Meanwhile, NLP and ML empower faculty with data-driven insights into text analysis, sentiment detection, and language modelling. The rise of AI and Generative AI further enables automation, personalized learning, and innovative teaching and research methodologies. This FDP structured around these themes equips educators with cutting-edge tools, fostering interdisciplinary collaboration and preparing students for an AI-driven future.
